YERMA

November 11-27, 2010

By Federico García Lorca | Directed by Warwick Dobson

Lorca's "tragic poem" is a harsh critique of the strict moral code that constrained women in mid-twentieth-century rural Spain. The play chronicles the passion, frustration and anguish of a young married woman as she struggles to come to terms with her inability to become a mother. Trapped within the confines of a loveless marriage and the victim of a judgmental and repressive community, her increasing desperation leads her to an unconventional and reckless course of action.
